stock on statements credited to W. B. Bradley, of this city, to the effect that Richmond fans will be giad to get back into the Virginia League. Mr. Bradley is quoted as saying that the majority of the fans are tired already of International League ball, and that the stockholders of the Richmond club have lost heavily and are in no mood to sink more money.

Coming from anybody else, such statements might be worth considering seriously, but when it is remembered that Mr. Bradley was the principal owner of the Richmond club of the Virginia League, and would be the one to benefit most by this city losing out in the international, the whole thing becomes a joke.

From a financial standpoint, the season has been a flat failure, although President Boatwright is quoted as saying that the deficit will not be as large as last year. It is to be hoped that it is not, especially in view of the fact that the Virginia League benefitted to the extent of $12.500 in real cash by the loss of Richmond. Without that money the league would never have survived the season. Suffolk alone dropped $5.000, it is said, while ePtershurg threw up the sponge completely. The Norfolk Ledger-Dispatch is author of the statement that not a single club broke even as far as gate receipts and operating expenses are concerned.

Whether W. B. Bradley is sincere in his statements or not, he is certainly one mistaken man. The Richmond fans are not tired of International League ball. They had to get adjusted to the change involved by long trips abroad and long sieges at home, but the second home series brought out a larger average than the first, and the third series beat them both, showing that the league was gaining friends here.

With a good nucleus to build a team from, Jack Dunn is going to make money for the local stockholders next year, and they know it. The International League has come to stay in Richmond, and local fans will be enjoying Double A ball when the Virgina League is a thing of history.

Another point forgotten by the Virginia League critics is tha fact that the attendance figures here are net, and not padded. If 1,500 is reported, that means 1,500 paid admissions, not a lot of deadheads.

It begins to look strongly as if the four ball teams of Greater New York would grand average a place in the second division at the finish.

Jim Thorpe, however, has an alibit it is worth $6,000 a year to be forced to sit on the bench every day and watch the Giants play.

The twenty-one-player rule having been declared null and void, all that is necessary is to find the twenty-one ball players.

We fail to see why so much space is wasted on the report that a Fed League player has become a million-aire. Everybody connected with the Feds has at least a million.

The Czar of Russia is said to be sending all his art treasures to Moscow for safekeeping, but Connie Mack can put it all over the Czar as a strategist. Connie sold his masterpieces and conducted an orderly retreat to the bank.

In his short National League career, Nehf, of the Braves, has shut out three teams—Pirates. Reds and Dodgers. His pitching ought to be considerable help to Stallings in the rush for to overhaul the Phillies.
